FORMER FBI DIRECTOR JAMES COMEY TO PUBLISH “SAVING JUSTICE” WITH FLATIRON BOOKS

(July 22, 2020 - New York, NY) Bob Miller, President and Publisher of Flatiron Books, announced today that the Macmillan division has acquired world rights to former Director of the FBI James Comey’s followup to his #1 New York Times bestseller A Higher Loyalty. The new book, SAVING JUSTICE: Truth, Transparency, and Trust, will be published January 12, 2021, with Vice President and Editorial Director Zachary Wagman editing; Matt Latimer and Keith Urbahn of Javelin represented Comey in the deal.

In the new book, Comey draws on his long, varied career in the law and justice system, from prosecuting mobsters as an Assistant US Attorney in the Southern District of New York in the 1980s to his tumultuous stint as FBI director working under Donald Trump, to illuminate the core values of the Department of Justice, and the path to restoring them. SAVING JUSTICE is a clarion call for a return to non-partisan law enforcement centered on American values.

“We’re honored to be James Comey’s publisher again for this new book,” said Miller. “It’s hard to imagine a more important message for our country right now than the need to restore our faith in the justice system, and SAVING JUSTICE is the perfect roadmap.”

SAVING JUSTICE will be published by Pan Macmillan in the UK and Droemer in Germany.
