

Tim Duggan to Join Henry Holt as V.P., Executive Editor on Feb. 1

New York, N.Y., Jan. 19, 2021 – Tim Duggan will join Henry Holt as V.P., Executive Editor on Feb. 1, 2021, it was announced today by Sarah Crichton, Holt’s V.P., Editor in Chief. Duggan brings with him a wealth of experience acquiring, editing and publishing notable fiction and nonfiction books, many of which were best sellers and recipients of prestigious literary awards. He will report to Crichton.

“I couldn’t be more excited to be joining the ultra-talented team at Holt,” said Duggan. “Their history of excellence and commitment to quality across a range of genres is without peer, so I feel enormously lucky to have this opportunity.”

“I admire Tim's breadth of interests and versatility, and his sharp eye for talent,” said Crichton. “I'm delighted he's joining our great team at Holt.”

Duggan was most recently the editor and publisher of an eponymous imprint at Crown. Previously, he was an executive editor at Harper. The authors he has edited include Annie Dillard, Uzodinma Iweala, Michiko Kakutani, Karan Mahajan, Daniel Mendelsohn, Timothy Snyder, J. D. Vance and David Wallace-Wells. The books he has edited include winners of the Pulitzer Prize, the National Book Critics Circle Award, the Women's Prize for Fiction, and multiple finalists for the National Book Award. In 2018, he received the Editorial Excellence Award from the Biographers International Organization. He is a fellow at the New York Institute for the Humanities at NYU and a member of the Council on Foreign Relations.
